TOWN LIBRARY.

LIBRARY TRUSTEES' REPORT.

The past year has been marked by increasing interest in our library. For statistics of its operation, reference is given to the report of the librarian. It will be seen that a large addition of books has been made the past year thereto, both by presentation and by purchase. Mr. Stephen Streeter and Mrs. G. H. French have presented books, and Frank T. Cole, Esq., has attested his interest in our town and library by his repeated presentations of many volumes, mainly of a standard character. Also a large and very fine framed portrait of his father, Capt. Theodore Cole, a native and for many years a most respected citizen of our town. A curio case has been presented and a beginning made in filling it with rare specimens, to which we hope others may be inspired to contribute thereto. Our library has passed its experimental stage and is now something tangible and worthy of the pride and patronage of every loyal citizen.

From the executor of the C. A. West estate, this town has received $800, and interest has accrued thereon of $35, or in all $835. Your trustees have expended therefrom prior to the financial year closing $180.92, and for the past year $98.84, or in all $279.76, leaving a balance in town treasury of $555.24.

The itemized expenditures of the year are as follows:

John D. Morris & Co., books,	$17 55
A. B. Skinner Co., books,	11 90
Review of Reviews, books,	8 00
DeWolfe Fiske Co.,	61 39
	$98 84

Your trustees have deemed it wise not to expend the entire amount of this legacy in any one year.

A new supplement to the catalogue of books is now in preparation and will soon be ready for distribution.

From the town appropriation we have paid for all necessary expenses other than librarian service.

Aside from the foregoing we have received as follows, account of town appropriation:

LENGTH OF SCHOOLS.

There has been a marked tendency to increase the length of the school year throughout the state. Twenty-five years ago the average length of the year for the schools of the state was less than twenty weeks. The average length now is more than thirty weeks per year. Our young people deserve all the schooling we can give them. Not that they always appreciate it at the time, but broadly it makes for better citizenship and for higher living and thinking. And if, as has been claimed, the commercial value of attendance upon public schools is ten dollars per day to the child, ought we not to make every effort to increase the length of the school year?

Many of the enterprising towns of the state have lengthened the school year to 32 or 34 or 36 weeks per year, and our young people will find themselves handicapped when they come into such competition.

THE GREAT QUESTION.

While I have been doing the various things that needed to be done, I have been measuring schemes that have presented themselves to me by this standard: Will they help to make the schools better?

Some of the teachers and pupils have done little things to improve the appearance of the school room. I think there is great value in this, and I shall offer rewards to all schools that do anything noticeable to improve the appearance of the school rooms or of the school grounds. I shall trust also that if the schools themselves show a good measure of civic pride, the citizens will be generous in appropriations for those things that are beyond our power, such as painting and repairing, etc.

I have put into the hands of each teacher a copy of the Course of Studies as prepared by the state department of public instruction, Mr. H. C. Morrison, superintendent. This is an eight-year elementary course, outlined quite fully, and meets the needs of our schools the best of anything I have seen. With only thirty weeks in the school year, and a low average of attendance, in many cases, it will be hard to follow this course; but it presents a splendid standard by which we may measure our work, and we are trying to adjust our work to this as closely as our limitations will permit.

Will two years of approved high school work meet our needs better than two years of a more general high school course? The tendency of the school is in the direction which suggests "yes" as an answer. There is an effort to complete thoroughly the eight year course of elementary studies, then to take the same studies for two years of high school work as are taken in the first two years of approved high schools. Perhaps this question of tying to a hard and fast course of study to gain the approval of the state authorities may as well come up for decision at the close of this school year. It will do no harm to consider its advantages and disadvantages at any rate.

TEACHERS.

I think the town of Westmoreland is fortunate in having such a list of teachers as it has had during the year. There is no other force worthy to be compared with the teacher in the making of a good school. This is the constant force which day after day is guiding and directing. I feel that my thanks are due each one for the generous cooperation in every plan to improve the work of the schools.

Respectfully submitted,

ALFRED B. MORRILL.
